About the Conference

People with Alzheimer's disease and their families are confronted with unique psychosocial challenges that can cause a great deal of anxiety if left unaddressed. It can be difficult for families and providers to know when and how to address sensitive topics such as driving risk, intimacy, and end-of-life care. This conference will shed light on the real challenges faced by those living with Alzheimer's disease in an effort to reduce stigma and facilitate conversation among patients, families, and healthcare providers.

The Annual Southern California Alzheimer's Disease Research Conference is hosted by the UC Irvine Institute for Memory Impairments and Neurological Disorders (UCI MIND) in partnership with Alzheimer's Orange County. Reaching a diverse audience of over 400 healthcare professionals, aging service providers, family caregivers, students, and researchers, the conference brings together internationally renowned experts to address our nation's progress in the battle against Alzheimer's disease and other causes of dementia.
